The Enemy will never “waste a good crisis,” so neither should we as God’s people. We can turn everyday adversity into advantage by loving others and leading them into God’s Kingdom during their time of need. The signs are around us everyday. We are truly in times of economic hardship, and some would even say that we are hinging on an Economic Event of Biblical Proportions. The idea of preparing for hardship is a timeless concept. How can you protect your family in the midst of financial crisis? God’s Word provides proven principles for preparing you to do well in any economic situation. The S.A.L.T. Plan is a culmination of those principles compiled into a practical guide that provides both biblical wisdom and sound advice to help you carefully plan for hard times, while continuing to be faithful with your God-given resources. The S.A.L.T. Plan™ has four distinct parts. Each is critical to achieving your goal of preparedness: Saving, Asset Allocation, Liquidity, and Truth. You are probably thinking, “Saving—no brainer, check. Asset Allocation—how much of what resources to save, okay, makes sense, check. Liquidity—keeping those assets accessible, check. But Truth? What does an intangible like Truth have to do with preparing for a disaster?” Truth is the cornerstone of the plan because implementing the first three components will avail you nothing if you fail to include Truth. What is that, exactly? For starters, it’s humble submission to God’s sovereignty and ownership of everything, including you. The Truth is that you are only a steward of the resources that God has entrusted to you, nothing more – but equally important – nothing less. As such, you must concern yourself with fulfilling His will, not yours.
